A little later than expected, Sun Mountain rolls out Combo Cart

By Keely Levins

Sun Mountain recently announced the roll out of the Combo Cart, an all-in-one golf bag/pushcart. If this sounds familiar, it's because the company made a similar reveal in early 2013, anticipating the Combo Cart would hit the market later that year. Design tweaks delayed the launch, but its summer 2014 introduction works well given the emerging category of hybrid golf bag/pushcarts.

Sun Mountain's version has three wheels, an aluminum-frame cart with a foot braking system and a built-in seat that folds flat when not in use. The bag has full-length individual club dividers and eight pockets for clothing and other accessories. It connects to the cart via velcro straps and can be replaced with another Combo Cart bag (one of the changes made from the original design). The Combo Cart comes in four colors with a retail price of $469.
